Hays is an ardent advocate of consolidation of all the steamboats in the Ohio river running south from Cincinnati, and calls attention as follows to Memphis, where success has crowned such enterprises: "The Memphis, Vicksburg and Arkansas River Packet Company, of which Maj. John D. Adams is president, and Capt. James Rees, jr., is superintendent, is now one of the best organizations in the West or South, and it cannot fail under its new management to be a popular line with the people and a financial success. The line is now managed by one man, that man knows and understands his business, and his word is law in all things pertaining to the running and management of the boats and the management of the boats, and such a man to manage them, they cannot fail to become very popular with passengers and shippers and prove to be a proud and profitable success.
